Caring for your camera at the beach: Tips on photography for beginners.

One of the top spots that many people choose to practice with their new cameras is the beach. Photography for beginners might just seem like brainless point-and-click with the newest, easy-to-use digital cameras. However, the beach is one place you'll really need to respect and care for your camera.

Here are some threats to your camera at the beach:

1. THEFT. This is going to take the fun out of a day of beach photography! For beginners, it might seem simple to hide the camera, but by doing so you may be leading it to one of several other threats.
2. MOISTURE. By hiding camera in a beach bag, you could be exposing it to intensive heat and humidity, or worse, salt water exposure through contact with towels or swimming items. Hiding it in the car can be just as bad. The humidity inside a hot car can allow moisture inside the camera and behind the lens.
3. SUNSCREEN AND BUG SPRAY. Carrying the camera around all day might seem like the easiest way to keep it safe, but contact with the chemicals you might be wearing could cause serious damage to your camera.
4. SAND. Sand is so fine, the grit can get into the mechanics of your camera too easily. Hiding your camera under a towel or beach bag is possibly the worst thing you could do to it.
5. HEAT. Leaving your camera exposed to intense sun is going to heat up the inner parts and possibly cause warping or melting! In addition, as mentioned earlier, the humidity can cause moisture to quickly seep in.

Photography for beginners includes taking care of your camera properly. At the beach, this means using a carrying case that's made for the camera and is both waterproof and sand proof. If you carry your camera, always keep it in its case and use a carrying strap. Clean your hands before taking pictures, and store it in a cool, dry place as much as possible.

These tips will help you fully enjoy your day of beach photography; for beginners, a day of fun picture taking could be the start of more complicated and sophisticated future photography. For beginners the beach is a wonderful place to practice as long as you keep in mind the hazards to your camera and do what you can to protect it.
